Radu "Radu C" Casapu from the USA is the new GeoGuessr World Champion

Late on Saturday evening, the GeoGuessr World Championship was decided in front of a packed crowd at the historic K.B. Hallen in Copenhagen. After a dramatic final, American player Radu "Radu C" Casapu emerged victorious, clinching the win with the decisive pinpoint placement that defeated Hungary's Szabolcs "Debre" Debre to the excitement of the audience.

This is the third consecutive year the World Championship in the Swedish-developed geography game GeoGuessr has been held, but the first time the final took place outside of Sweden. The journey to the championship has been long and intense, with qualifying events in Tokyo, Dallas, Jönköping, and Copenhagen. A total of 16 of the world's best GeoGuessr players competed in the finals, while the live audience – along with the millions of viewers who followed the tournament online – witnessed match after match of world-class gameplay.

This year's World Championship has been an incredible journey. We've visited four countries, met our amazing community, and connected with GeoGuessr fans from all around the globe, says Mikael Falgard, co-founder and Head of Esports at GeoGuessr. We are extremely proud of all the competitors, who have given the audience matches we will not soon forget. With this championship, we've truly taken GeoGuessr as an esports to a whole new level.

The final night was also a complete experience for those attending in person. Between matches, the stage featured performances by Icona Pop, Mapei, Niki & the Dove, and The Sidemen – together turning K.B. Hallen into a spectacular celebration.
